“ The lecturers and faculty members at Griffith College are not only wonderful teachers as well as mentors but are also extremely helpful in relation to course work, assignments and examinations. It is evident from the close relationship students form with faculty members that they really do hold the best interests of their students at heart. ”

Postgraduate Diploma in Law

LL.M. in International Law

LL.M. in International Commercial Law

LL.M. in International Human Rights Law

About the Course

The LL.M. (Master of Laws) is an internationally recognised postgraduate law degree. It is obtained by completing a one- year full-time programme, daytime or evening. There are three LL.M. Programmes on offer at Griffith College, all of which are international in focus - a key advantage in today's globalised legal landscape.

Learners may tailor their degrees to suit their interests. Through their subject choice, they will emerge with a Masters in International Commercial Law, International Human Rights Law, or International Law.

Careers

Successful completion of the LL.M. can open up promotion opportunities in existing employment. Completing an LL.M provides learners with the skills required to work as a researcher or legal advisor with governmental departments, NGOs or businesses. Existing legal practitioners can use their LL.M. to specialise in an area of interest.

Progression

On completion of the Postgraduate Diploma, graduates may progress to PhD studies. Graduates of this programme also have the option to continue their studies at Griffith College on one of our professional courses.

Entry Requirements

Applicants must hold a 2.2 degree in law or a degree with a significant law component (at least 50%) or foreign equivalent or relevant work experience.

Applicants who do not meet the academic entry requirements may apply to the College for consideration of their Accredited Prior Learning (APL) or Accredited Prior Experiential Learning (APEL) in accordance with Griffith College's APL/APEL procedures.

Programme Delivery

The LL.M. in International Law usually is one year in duration. The learner will complete six subjects and a dissertation. Assessment in the taught modules in semesters 1 and 2 is by way of assignments and examinations. A dissertation is completed over the summer months under the guidance of a designated supervisor.

I was very happy to discover that Griffith College offered the Postgraduate Diploma in International Human Rights. I was able to complete the course while also working full-time. All the lecturers were very dedicated and thorough. The Law Faculty also offered a great deal of very interesting extracurricular projects, events and lectures.
